

Introducing Always Connected™ Internet

As the warm weather continues this summer, Comwave is excited to share with you all of our latest business news and updates. Below, you can find new information about the perfect internet backup plan for businesses, and about Comwave's Always Connected Internet.

Never Let an Outage Interrupt Your Business

This month, yet another widespread network outage affected residents and businesses all across Canada. Those affected were unable to access the internet, make phone calls, accept payments from customers or run their business operations for over 24 hours, with providers including Rogers, TekSavvy and Tbaytel among those experiencing significant network issues. The effects were widespread, with Interac debit and e-transfer payments widely unavailable, online court dates postponed, and local police units reporting that residents may have trouble calling 911. Fortunately, the Comwave network was not affected by the outage, and Comwave customers did not report issues accessing their internet and VoIP services. The Comwave network is unique and resilient, with connectivity from over 100 sources built in to avoid widespread outages. But with so many businesses affected, we've recently discussed the proper internet backup plan and failover options with many more Canadian business owners.

Do You Have An Internet Backup Plan?

For businesses looking to avoid being affected by a network outage, they must have an internet backup plan in place. An internet backup plan ensures that in case of a network outage, all business devices can quickly and seamlessly transition to an alternate internet source through a wireless LTE connection. This way, business devices can continue to operate properly, employees can continue to use business systems, and normal business operations continue unaffected. At Comwave, we've implemented internet backup plans for thousands of Canadian businesses, and these implementations have only increased over the past month. With over 70% of businesses experiencing an unplanned internet outage during the year, all businesses need to have an internet backup plan in place. With an internet backup plan, you'll never have to worry about an internet outage affecting your business, and you'll have an advantage over all your competitors without a backup plan.

Protect Your Business with 100% Internet Uptime

Comwave Always Connected Internet is built to achieve 100% internet uptime, and keep your business running smoothly regardless of a network outage. How? If your primary internet network fails, Comwave Always Connected Internet springs into action. Your business devices seamlessly connect to the wireless LTE internet router that's provided, and you maintain the connectivity you need to power your business. Comwave's unique and resilient network and connectivity with over 100 different sources offers comprehensive redundancy so that no matter the extent of a network failure, you can always access the internet as often as you need it. Your business internet, your POS systems and your internet-reliant business devices – they're far too important to rely on without a backup plan, especially with network outages becoming more and more common. Other internet connections go down, but Comwave's unique network and Always Connected Internet are built with resiliency in mind. Never let an internet network outage interrupt your business again with Comwave.

Comwave Always Connected Internet is available at just $44.95 per month.
